

Corporate team-building events in Cincinnati Parks are a win-win situation: local companies can boost employee morale as they advance the natural beauty of our parks. Read more about Parks-organized improvement projects that get your employees working together.

Can Cincinnati Parks Help Your Company Build Team Spirit? “Naturally”

When your company establishes a volunteer partnership with Cincinnati Parks, your employees will experience a well-organized and enjoyable team-building event. Volunteer opportunities are available for any size group and for any amount of time.

Some project ideas:

- Build a trail
- Clean up a wooded area
- Plant flowers and trees
- Adopt a park
- Build a bridge
- Your own suggestions!

What a Difference These Companies Made In A Day!

Recently, several companies met a challenge issued by Cincinnati Mayor Mark Mallory to provide a small army of volunteers to dig in and clean up downtown, and make a big difference.

On May 21, 2001, nine companies sent 1,000 employees to points in the downtown area, including Washington Park in Over-The-Rhine, the Civic Garden Center’s community gardens near downtown, and the Ohio Riverfront area where ground breaks in September for Cincinnati Riverfront Park.

Who Were These Everyday Heroes? They Came From:

Duke Energy, GE Aviation, Convergys, The Home Depot, Best Buy, The Model Group, PNC Bank, The Nielsen Company, and 5/3 Bank.

If your company wants to “give back” to the community while enjoying a unique team-building experience, contact Jude Johnson with Cincinnati Parks at (513) 861-8970 or Jude.Johnson@cincinnati-oh.gov

Your Company Can Also Help By Pledging Donations.

PledgeConnect offers park friends an easy avenue for contributing to park programs, events, and fundraising campaigns. If you would like to donate to Cincinnati Parks, please do so with one easy click. Thank You!
